Working Principle

Working Principle

Main Engine

Some materials contain volatile components, during the drying process, the water vapor in the warehouse is cooled by the evaporator and discharged with the condensate water. The condensate water with volatile components is collected, completing the material drying and effective component recovery.

Powerful Compressor

American Copeland compressor is used in the compression system, which has strong performance, and can adapt to long-term stable operation in harsh environment. Multiple safety protection such as over-current protection and phase loss protection is set to effectively ensure the service life of the equipment.

High Stability Electrical Components

The electrical components are Schneider components, equipped with high-performance electronic control chip of six layer printed circuit board, strong anti-electromagnetic interference, intelligent electronic control, automatic adjustment, to ensure the safe and stable operation of the unit.

High Temperature and Humidity Resistance Fan

The circulation system adopts frontal axial flow fan and circulating fan with high temperature and humidity resistance. It has high performance and high air volume, effectively increases air flow, rapid heat exchange and strong dehumidification. The motor is all aluminum copper winding, waterproof and durable.

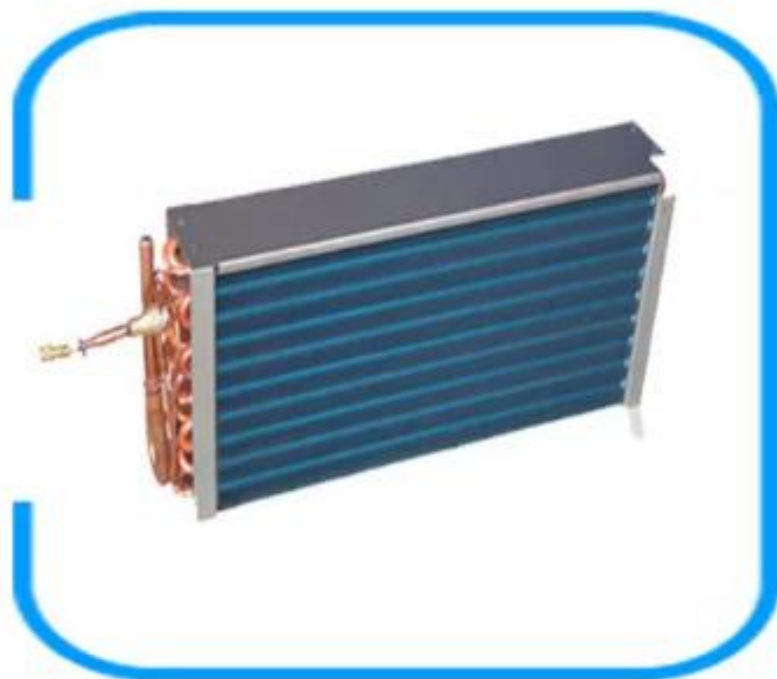

Automatic Flow Control

The flow control adopts three flower electronic expansion valve and four-way valve, with high reliability which can realize automatic flow regulation under refrigeration and heating conditions, so that the equipment can always maintain efficient operation.

Hydrophilic Aluminum Foil Heat Exchanger

The heat exchanger is made of hydrophilic aluminum foil material, which is corrosion-resistant, mildew proof and odorless. The heat absorption area is larger and the heating efficiency is higher. The noise caused by the condensation water blocking the air flow can be effectively avoided.
